Despite remarkable advances in shoulder diagnostics, surgical techniques, and rehabilitation, many shoulder problems remain unresolved. Complex anatomy, failed previous treatments, bone loss, stiffness, infection, and high functional demands continue to challenge even experienced specialists.

The Berlin International Shoulder Course 2027 is dedicated to the complex, controversial, and unsolved problems of the shoulder. Through case-based discussions, expert debates, and evidence-driven decision-making, international faculty will share strategies for managing difficult scenarios where standard algorithms fail.
